THE KENOW WILDFIRE

The Kenow fire was first spotted by Parks Canada on August 30th in BC's Flathead Valley. The fire, originally 5 hectares in size, exhibited rapid growth, reaching approximately 4,000 hectares by September 3rd. By September 8th, Parks Canada had issued a Mandatory Evacuation Order, protecting infrastructure within the park had become a main priority, and personnel and equipment were working around the clock. On September 11th, the Kenow fire reached the Cameron Valley. Crews worked throughout the night to protect the Waterton townsite, and, in the end, were able to hold the perimeter. However, the fire continued to spread beyond the park and by September 14th had reached approximately 36,000 hectares in size. Precipitation and cooler temperatures helped crews hold the fire and by September 20th the Evacuation Order was lifted.

Fires are a natural part of a forest's ecosystem. They can help create ideal conditions for regeneration of plant-life and can lead to renewed environments that foster biodiversity. We know recovery from the fire will be a long road, we also know this is a natural cycle that will have long-term positive effects on the vegetation and wildlife in the area.

Our sincere gratitude goes out to the fire crews, support teams and to Parks Canada; their incredible efforts saved our businesses and homes. The landscape in Waterton has changed, but it remains breathtaking nonetheless, and the spirit of the community will always remain resilient.
